SUNDAY was the coldest day since this year, some say for the first time, but let that be as it may, it was very cold. At 7 a.m. the thermometer stood twelve degrees below zero. During the forenoon the wind began to rise from the east, making unpleasant for outsiders. Several people had their ears frozen going to church. Late in the afternoon it began to snow, the wind blowing from the south-east, and the temperature rose again until early Monday morning the snow had changed to rain.
