DONATE YOUR COLLECTION

The California State Railroad Museum welcomes donations. The Museum's Collections are primarily the result of the gifts of many individual and corporate donors. The Museum makes additions to the collections primarily by donation more than 95 percent of the present collection is the result of gifts from more than 2,000 donors since the Museum's inception in 1976.

Each year families, collectors, and companies select the California State Railroad Museum as the permanent repository for their railroad photographs, books, manuscripts, and artifacts. The Museum Library has a distinguished record for acquiring, organizing, preserving and making available collections of photographic and documentary materials.

On May 2, 1981, the California State Railroad Museum opened to the public, as did the Museum Library. The library has been an integral component of CSRM since the project's inception. It was clear to the founders of the Museum that a thoughtfully assembled collection of published, manuscript, and pictorial materials would not only enhance the museum's services but also support its conservation and education programs. With this goal in mind, as railroad equipment and artifacts were gathered for study and exhibit, collections staff also acquired documentary materials to form the nucleus of the California State Railroad Museum Library.

READING ROOM

open to the public without charge
Tuesday - Saturday 1:00 to 5:00 p.m.

Library collections held off-site in the new California Statewide Museum Collection Center are available for research. Please contact Library staff in advance of your visit. Staff will bring requested materials to the Library once per week, each Tuesday.

The California State Railroad Museum Library provides public access to the Museum's documentary collections. The Library is located adjacent to the Museum of Railroad History on the second floor of the Big Four Building at 111 "I" Street.

Library materials do not circulate and may only be used in the reading room. There is an extensive set of railroad history and reference books, as well as periodicals, available for review in the reading room. The remainder of the collection is in closed stacks or housed off-site.*

COLLECTIONS

There are several levels of access to documentary collections. For some, there is only an alphabetical list of railroads represented. For others, there are descriptive finding aids. Many document types have been catalogued into databases which can be searched by keywords and categories such as corporate name, geographic location or date.
